THE DIRTY HEADS BRING LAID-BACK HIP-HOP INFUSED REGGAE TO JOHN ASCUAGA'S NUGGET

Rooted in the Orange County community of Huntington Beach, the Dirty Heads emerged onto the Southern California music scene with their unique signature blend of acoustic infused hip-hop and classic reggae.

Living the laid-back SoCal lifestyle and inspired by the rock and reggae sounds of Bob Marley, Sublime, 311 and The Beastie Boys, the band's music evolved into their distinct Dirty Heads style.

The band's highly-anticipated expanded album titled, Any Port in a Storm features 22 tracks and a bonus video that are reminiscent of the upbeat, sun-soaked Southern California party energy. The first smash hit single is "Lay Me Down" featuring Rome, of Sublime with Rome.

Recently, named one of the "Best New Bands of 2010" by Rolling Stone, the Dirty Heads' music has been attracting attention throughout the world of entertainment. They have been a featured artist on Fuel TV and their songs have been featured in the movie and soundtrack for Surf's Up . Actor Matthew McConaughey selected the band's music to be in his film, Surfer Dude. In addition, the Dirty Heads can be heard in Tony Hawk's Downhill Jam video game, several other music compilations and surf/skate videos.
